Predavanje će se održati u srijedu 17. listopada 2012. godine u 12,00 sati na Filozofskom fakultetu u Rijeci u predavaonici 207. Moderatorica predavanja bit će dr. sc. Vesna Kovač, izv. prof.

Predavanje će se održati na engleskom jeziku bez prevođenja. U nastavku možete pročitati kratki uvodnik u predavanje.

The theme of this lecture concerns the kind of teachers we need in Europe to develop active democratic citizenship. This is critical for how we address inequalities, how we educate young and active citizens, and how we develop with them conceptions of human rights that are at the core of democracy and citizenship. I argue that these decisions are essentially political: teachers are political actors, the curriculum is a political statement, and teaching itself is a political activity. Teaching is not neutral: education can reproduce existing social patterns, but it can also have the power to transform society, and to promote equity and social justice (Alistair Ross).
